Hurry Up and Wait by Bill Powell

I think we can all relate to the expression, "hurry up and wait." We live in a world that is moving a hundred miles an hour yet there are those times where you feel you are going backward. Remember the saying, "I go one step forward and two steps back?"

It's summertime and that usually means people are going places, and going places usually means there will be some waiting involved. The last time I went to Wally World I think most of the lines were at least an hour long. We wait while our car is being fixed. We wait in traffic. We wait in the doctor's office. We wait for summer and then we wait for cooler weather. What about the expressions I can't wait for Christmas, I can't wait for school to be out or back in. I can't wait until I am old enough.

There are times we are excited and happy to wait. Telling someone, "I will wait for you right here" or have you ever said, "No I don't mind; I will wait." Many who have a loved one serving in the military wait sacrificially. I know of some who are happy to wait on the bench in the mall while the wife shops. Waiting kind of aids in the enjoyment, doesn't it? When you finally arrive, Abh finally. That is a good feeling, isn't it. Waiting also builds patience and patience is character.

Romans 5:3-4 More than that, we rejoice in our sufferings, knowing that suffering produces endurance, and endurance produces character, and character produces hope.

We are still waiting on critical information so we can move forward on our new Key West station. We are also waiting to hear about a possible new frequency but are not sure. We will have to wait. When I look back at all the times we have waited and sometimes it was many years, I see that it was worth the wait. I am certain a great deal of waiting is worth the wait. Wait, I have one more thing to talk about concerning waiting.

"Wait for it!"

We are all waiting on the Lord. I am convinced when He finally returns or we have finished our course and pass from this life to our heavenly home, it will all be worth the wait.

Romans 8:23 And not only the creation, but we ourselves, who have the firstfruits of the Spirit, groan inwardly as we wait eagerly for adoption as sons, the redemption of our bodies.

God Bless you all. You are a blessing in more ways than you know. Have a safe and happy summer. Happy waiting.

Prayer Corner

As we celebrate the freedom we enjoy in this country, let us pray for our brothers and sisters who do not enjoy such liberty. Whether chained by governments and soldiers, or legalism and religion, let us pray that the liberty Christ died to give will spread to prisoners far and wide.

We are working to resolve an issue some of you are having using our app on newer Android devices. Until this is resolved you can download a free app called SHOUTcast to make us accessible on your device.

Are You Seeking?! by Donna Bramlett

You will seek me and find me, when you seek me with all your heart.
(Jer 29:13)

How precious these words are! Can there be any greater promise than this? All the beauties of heaven and the joys of earth cannot compare to turning a corner in diligent search and coming upon the magnificence of the Creator Himself, wrapped in love and mercy and glorious hope. There have been many times that promise alone has kept me going forward, knowing that if God promises I will find Him, then I WILL find Him. Onward Christian soldier. Strengthen the feeble knees and lift the drooping hands.

It is not surprising that we find Him the brightest when our day is the darkest. I read this recently and it resonates with truth:

Vast areas of Scripture will never be meaningful to us unless we go through the experiences for which they give insight. It was for this reason that God allowed all of his servants in Scripture to experience conflicts, and it is for this reason that we go through them as well.

(Loving Monday, p. 39, lovingmonday.com)

Each difficulty, each challenge, every conflict can reveal a new facet of our Father that we did not know before. But here is where the great IF comes in. IF we seek Him wholeheartedly, we will find Him for this moment, this situation. The most touching example of this is in John 20:15, where Mary is weeping brokenhearted beside Jesus' tomb. Jesus comes up behind her and says, "Woman, why are you weeping? Whom are you seeking?" She was certainly seeking Him with all her heart, and He was reminding her of that ancient promise. He is situationally relevant. He is personal. And He is here.

God bless us with His presence as we seek Him today.

Free Food by Edie Schmidt

Last month we received an announcement for broadcast that I was pretty excited about. It told of 82 locations locally that were providing meals over the summer for children. I couldn't wait to share that news with all the potentially hungry children and teens in our listening area. I could tell them where to find nourishment for their bodies and it was free. Someone else had paid the cost. We talked about it on the air. We put the announcement on our website. I wanted everyone to know.

If the similarity is striking you already, kudos! It took me a while longer to see it. What if I had the same enthusiasm for helping people find spiritual nourishment? What if I could confidently direct the lost, hurting and hopeless to a source of help and hope? And it occurred to me, that would be our job description at The Cornerstone. Perhaps it's yours too. Whether you are telling friends about your favorite radio station or driving around town with a bumper sticker on your vehicle, you can feel good about sending others to our broadcast locations. Cornerstone proudly broadcasts the gospel of Jesus Christ seven days a week through nationally-known speakers and teachers but it also helps listeners connect locally by featuring local pastors daily and on weekends. When listeners hear about a church they want to visit, they can find all the contact information by clicking the link in our program guide at wjlu.org. If you listen to a local church service regularly, we hope you will take a moment and let them know you appreciate their commitment to providing a location for spiritual nourishment.

Roller Coasters, Life and Contentment

by Chris Johnson

Have you ever come to end of a roller coaster ride and thought, "Whew, I'm glad that's over?" Maybe you're like me and think, "Oh come on is that it?" The reality is that theme park roller coasters have a beginning and an end and they are typically a fairly short journey, although for many the ride might seem like eternity. The same is true with life. Sometimes we feel like our lives are speeding by like a runaway train while other times we can almost hear the second hand of life's clock ticking. Too often I'm focusing on the speed at which time is going instead of enjoying the time no matter its speed. Truthfully this is an oft conversation between the Lord and me. Jesus said we ought not to be anxious, the apostles echoed his instruction, and it seems evident that God desires a people who trust in him no matter where they are in the journey of life.

We as God's children are called to depend upon him not only for salvation from sin and the gift of eternal life but for all of life. Jesus mentioned our food and our clothing to remind us that God cares even for the most basic and fundamental needs of life. He loves us and cares for us, so let's respond to him by walking in obedience to his call for contentment, and this not only is true of our personal lives but should flow into the areas of our family, friends, workplace and the list goes on. Pray for me and I'll pray for you!
